Dear Harold,

As per your production, The Assassination of John F. Kennedy by Albert Neuman is an observant book.

Mr Neuman alleges that Oswald, a "Marxist", was a lone killer but implies that George De Mohrenschildt was involved in the attempt on Walker and that "no investigation ... that omits a relentless thorough questioning of The De Mohrenschildts can be in any sense complete."

Neuman "explains" this contradiction by claiming that De Mohrenschildt, the companion of George Braun, John Mecom, John De Mare, Mrs Auchincloss etc., is himself "pro-left".

Certainly, De Mohrenschildt is one of the most intriguing of the living figures in the affair - but in a far different context.

Was he the "cut out" at link between Oswald and his case officer?

Certainly, the movements of James Earl Ray follow a classic intelligence pattern. Ray meets a man named Raul who gives him "money and keeps him moving".

Even if Ray "tracked", what could he say?

But then compartmentalization is the essence of intelligence operations.

The suppression of material evidence is a bleak chapter in American History.

The National Archives have become the repository of America's hidden life.

Sincerely,

Edward P. Williams
